I. INTRODUCTION

If the LORD is all good, He would never mislead anyone, yet alone an entire group of people. Thus every religion on earth throughout history has legitimacy, best viewed as shades of grey. In the Bible there is a dichotomy between the Old Testament, the digital logic of the LORD's 10 Commandments, and the New Testament, Jesus's fuzzy logic of love.

If the Spirit of the LORD pervades everything inspiring people, then plausibly all people's best is of the LORD, and rigid cultural and linguistic differences are mute. Thus foremost we consider words of religious importance, and we create a course topology on them. Also history records the lives of eminent people, providing a testing ground for the legitimacy of reincarnation.

Our main premise is coincidence happens for a reason, and by examining the pattern this axiom implies, we prove the LORD exists. Approached differently, if coincidence has meaning on any set, then plausibly it does on all people's best. We group words according to similarity in: sound (despite independent linguistic roots), spelling, lexicality, meaning, and association. There is a consistent pattern of a trinity containing a ring and an emanation. Mathematically speaking, this paper loosely constructs topological graphs containing nonrandom patterns across languages.

"For there is hope for a tree,
When it is cut down, that it will sprout again,
And its shoots will not fail.
Though its roots grow old in the ground,
And its stump dies in the dry soil,
At the scent of water it will flourish
And put forth sprigs like a plant.
But man dies and lies prostrate.
Man expires, and where is he?
... If a man dies, will he live again?" (Job 14:7-14)

"How often is the lamp of the wicked put out,
Or does their calamity fall on them?
Does God apportion destruction in His anger?
Are they as straw before the wind,
And like chaff which the storm carries away?
You say, 'God stores away a man's iniquity for his sons.'
Let God repay him so that he may know it.
Let his own eyes see his decay,
And let him drink of the wrath of the Almighty." (Job 21:17-20)

"Behold, I go forward but He is not there,
And backward, but I cannot perceive Him;
When He acts on the left, I cannot behold Him;
He turns on the right, I cannot see Him.
But He knows the way I take;
When He has tried me, I shall come forth as gold." (Job 23:8-10)

"Then the LORD answered Job out of the whirlwind and said,
Who is this that darkens counsel
By words without knowledge?
Now gird up your loins like a man,
And I will ask you, and you instruct Me!
Where were you when I laid the foundation of the earth?" (Job 38:1-4)

"Behold now, Behemoth, which I made as well as you; ...
He is confident, though the Jordan rushes to his mouth." (Job 40:15-23)

"Then all his brothers, and all his sisters, and all who had known him before, came to him, and they ate bread with him in his house; and they consoled him and comforted him for all the evil that the LORD had brought on him. And each one gave him one piece of money, and each a ring of gold." (Job 42:11)

Delilah (between 1127-1070 BCE)

"Then she said to him, 'How can you say, "I love you," when your heart is not with me? You have deceived me these three times and have not told me where your great strength is.' And it came about when she pressed him daily with her words and urged him, that his soul was annoyed to death. So he told her all that was in his heart and said to her, 'A razor has never come on my head, for I have been a Nazirite to God from my mother's womb. If I am shaved, then my strength will leave me and I shall become weak and be like any other man.'" (Judges 16:15-17)

Caesar's barber (between 100-44 BCE)

"Caesar was first captivated by this proof of Cleopatra's bold wit, and was afterwards so overcome by the charm of her society that he made a reconciliation between her and her brother, on condition that she should rule as his colleague in the kingdom.

A festival was kept to celebrate this reconciliation, where Caesar's barber, a busy listening fellow, whose excessive timidity made him inquisitive into everything, discovered that there was a plot carrying on against Caesar by Achillas, general of the king's forces, and Pothinus, the eunuch. Caesar, on the first intelligence of it, set a guard upon the hall where the feast was kept and killed Pothinus." (Plutarch's Life of Caesar)

But his [Lot's] wife, from behind him, looked back; and she became a pillar of salt."

Then his brothers said to him, 'Are you actually going to reign over us? Or are you really going to rule over us?' So they hated him even more for his dreams and for his words. Now he had still another dream, and related it to his brothers, and said, 'Lo, I have had still another dream; and behold, the sun and the moon and eleven stars were bowing down to me.'"

IX. OMENS

The Bible is full of omens, and while skepticism and analysis are healthy, many modern readers discard them all as superstition. Surely ancient Romans were not intimate with the Bible, let us see if omens from independent sources agree.

Plutarch's Life of Fabius, regarding Hannibal:

"Besides the more common signs of thunder and lightening then happening, the report of several unheard of and utterly strange portents much increased the popular consternation. For it was said that some targets sweated blood; that at Antium, when they reaped their corn, many of the ears were filled with blood; that it had rained red-hot stones; that the Falerians had seen the heavens open and several scrolls falling down, in one of which was plainly written, 'Mars himself stirs his arms.' " [reaper, brimstone, scrolls]

"The friends of Hannibal earnestly persuaded him to follow up his victory, and pursue the flying Romans into the very gates of Rome, assuring him that in five days' time he might sup in the Capitol; nor is it easy to imagine what consideration hindered him from it. It would seem rather that some supernatural or divine intervention caused the hesitation and timidity which he now displayed, and which made Barcas, a Carthaginian, tell him with indignation, 'You know, Hannibal, how to gain a victory, but not how to use it.' " [foreshadowing]

Plutarch's Life of Marcellus, regarding Hannibal:

"And, truly, many other prodigies affrighted him; some temples had been struck by lightening, and in Jupiter's temple mice had gnawed the gold; it was reported, also, that an ox had spoken, and that a boy had been born with a head like an elephant's." [ox speaking, elephant head]

Plutarch's Life of Caesar:

"[Caesar's] soldiers were forced to dig up a kind of root which grew there, and tempering it with milk, to feed on it. Sometimes they made a kind of bread of it, and advancing up to the enemy's outposts, would throw in these loaves" [root, loaf]

"Fate, however, is to all appearance more unavoidable than unexpected. For many strange prodigies and apparitions are said to have been observed shortly before this event [Caesar's assassination] ... a number of men were seen, looking as if they were heated through with fire, contending with each other; that a quantity of flame issued from the hand of a soldier's servant, so that they who saw it thought he must be burnt, but that after all he had no hurt. As Caesar was sacrificing, the victim's heart was missing, a very bad omen, because no living creature can subsist without a heart. One finds it also related by many that a soothsayer bade him prepare for some great danger on the Ides of March. When this day was come, Caesar, as he went to the senate, met this soothsayer, and said to him by way of raillery, 'The Ides of March are come,' who answered him calmly, 'Yes, they are come, but they are not past.' The day before his assassination he supped with Marcus Lepidus; and as he was signing some letters according to his custom, as he reclined at table, there arose a question what sort of death was the best. At which he immediately, before any one could speak, said, 'A sudden one.' [fire unburnt, Ides, dictation]

After this, as he was in bed with his wife, all the doors and windows of the house flew open together; he was startled at the noise and the light which broke into the room, and sat up in his bed, where by the moonshine he perceived Calpurnia fast asleep, but heard her utter in her dream some indistinct words and inarticulate groans. She fancied at that time she was weeping over Caesar, and holding him butchered in her arms. Others say this was not her dream, but that she dreamed that a pinnacle, which the senate, as Livy relates, had ordered to be raised on Caesar's house by way of ornament and grandeur, was tumbling down, which was the occasion of her tears and ejaculations. When it was day, she begged of Caesar, if it were possible, not to stir out, but to adjourn the senate to another time; and if he slighted her dreams, that she would be pleased to consult his fate by sacrifices and other kinds of divination. Nor was he himself without some suspicion and fears; for he never before discovered any womanish superstition in Calpurnia, whom he now saw in such great alarm." [gates, dreams, pillar]

"But the great genius which attended him though his lifetime even after his death remained as the avenger of his murder, pursuing through every sea and land all those who where concerned in it, and suffering none to escape, but reaching all who in any sort or kind were either actually engaged in the fact, or by their counsels any way promoted it. [reaper]

The most remarkable of mere human coincidences was that which befell Cassius, who, when he was defeated at Philippi, killed himself with the same dagger which he had made use of against Caesar. The most signal preternatural appearances were the great comet, which shone very bright for seven nights after Caesar's death, and then disappeared, and the dimness of the sun, whose orb continued pale and dull for the whole of that year, never showing its ordinary radiance at its rising, and giving but a weak and feeble heat. The air consequently was damp and gross for want of stronger rays to open and rarify it. The fruits, for that reason, never properly ripened, and began to wither and fall off for want of heat before they were fully formed. But abobe all, the phantom which appeared to Brutus showed the murder was not pleasing to the gods. [reaper, comet, seven, sun, phantom]

... [Brutus] saw a terrible figure, like that of a man but of unusual stature and severe countenance. He was somewhat frightened at first, but seeing it neither did nor spoke anything to him, only stood silently by his bedside, he asked who it was. The spectre answered him, 'They evil genius, Brutus, and thou shalt see me at Philippi.' Brutus answered courageously, 'Well, I shall see you,' and immediately the appearance vanished. ... The night before the second battle, the same phantom appeared to him again, but spoke not a word. He presently understood his destiny was at hand, and exposed himself to all the danger of the battle. Yet he did not die in the fight, but seeing his men defeated, got up to the top of a rock, and there presenting his sword to his naked breast, and assisted, as they say, by a friend, who helped him to give the thrust, met his death." [phantom]

Plutarch's Life of Antony, regarding Caesar's revenge:

"These prodigies were said to have announced the war. Pisaurum, where Antony had settled a colony, on the Adriatic sea, was swallowed up by an earthquake; sweat ran from one of the marble statues of Antony at Alba for many days together, and though frequently wiped off, did not stop. When he himself was in the city of Patrae, the temple of Hercules was struck by lightening, and at Athens, the figure of Bacchus was torn by a violent wind out of the Battle of the Giants, and laid flat upon the theatre; with both which deities Antony claimed connection, professing to be descended from Hercules, and from his imitating Bacchus in his way of living having received the name of young Bacchus. The same whirlwind at Athens also brought down, from amongst many others which were not disturbed, the colossal statues of Fumenes and Attalus, which were inscribed with Anthony's name. And in Cleopatra's admiral galley, which was called the Antonias, a most inauspicious omen occurred. Some swallows had built in the stern of the galley, but other swallows came, beat the first away, and destroyed their nests." [earthquake, whirlwind, birds]

X. TELEPATHY

We have proven the LORD of the Old Testament is telepathic, for how else did He inspire etymologies? Prime Biblical examples are the Prophets and hardening Pharaoh's heart in Exodus. Thus we may reasonably postulate that the Son of God has similar telepathic ability. Indeed this is non-corporeally confirmed in the Acts of the Apostles, written in Greek not Hebrew, where Saul hears a voice but sees no one, and is subsequently transformed from a rabid anti-Christian to the apostle St. Paul. Doubting the narrative, a skeptic may yet doubt G's telepathy. But the veracity of Saul's complete change of character and faith is not in doubt, as his behavior is well documented.

Having established reincarnation, we can examine the historical record for evidence of corporeal telepathy. All the lives of G stand in evidence, with Cleopatra the prime example. Mark Antony, a career soldier styling himself young Bacchus, is completely transformed into a love crazed lunatic, similar to St. Paul. Note that this change is recorded independent of the Biblical tradition. Consistency of powerful influence beyond possible natural ability proves telepathy. And what is love, the Greeks distinguished eight different types?

From Plutarch's Life of Antony:

"In fine, they so melted and unmanned him [Anthony] that, fully believing she [Cleopatra] would die if he forsook her, he put off the war and returned to Alexandria, deferring his Median expedition until next summer, though news came of the Parthians being all in confusion with intestine disputes."

"Cleopatra, jealous of the honours Octavia had received in Athens (for Octavia was much beloved by the Athenians), courted the favor of the people with all sorts of attentions. ... He [Anthony] sent orders to Rome to have Octavia removed out of his house. She left it, we are told, accompanied by all his children, except the eldest by Fulvia, who was then with his father, weeping and grieving that she must be looked upon as one of the causes of the war. The Romans pitied, not so much her, as Anthony himself, and more particularly those who had seen Cleopatra, whom they could report to have no way the advantage of Octavia either in youth or in beauty."

"As soon as Caesar [Augustus] had completed his preparations, he had a decree made declaring war on Cleopatra, and depriving Anthony of the authority which he had let a woman exercise in his place. Caesar added that he had drunk potions that had bereaved him of his senses, and that the generals they would have to fight with would be Mardion the eunuch, Pothinus, Iras, Cleopatra's hair-dressing girl, and Charmion, who were Anthony's chief state-councillors."

"But so wholly was he [Anthony] now the mere appendage to the person of Cleopatra that, although he was much superior to the enemy in land forces, yet, out of compliance to his mistress, he wished the victory to be gained by sea."

"But the fortune of the day was still undecided, and the battle equal, when in a sudden Cleopatra's sixty ships were seen hoisting sail and making out to sea in full flight, right through the ships that were engaged. For they were placed behind the great ships, which, in breaking through, they put into disorder. The enemy was astonished to see them sailing off with a fair wind towards Peloponnesus. Here it was that Antony showed to all the world he was no longer actuated by the thoughts and motives of a commander or a man, or indeed by his own judgement at all, and what was once said as a jest, that the soul of a lover lives in some one else's body, he proved to be a serious truth. For, as if he had been born part of her, and must move with her wheresoever she went, as soon as he saw her ship sailing away, he abandoned all that were fighting and spending their lives for him, and put himself aboard a galley of five banks of oars, taking with him only Alexander of Syria and Scellias, to follow her that had so well begun his ruin and would hereafter accomplish it."

"Only a few had known of Antony's flight; and those who were told of it could not at first give any belief to so incredible a thing as that a general who had nineteen entire legions and twelve thousand horse upon the seashore, could abandon all and fly away; and he, above all, who had so often experienced both good and evil fortune, and had in a thousand wars and battles been inured to changes. His soldiers, however, would not give up their desires and expectations, still fancying he would appear from some part or other, and showed such a generous fidelity to his service that, when they were thoroughly assured that he was fled in earnest, they kept themselves in a body seven days, making no account of the messages that Caesar sent to them."

"He [Antony] retired into the city, crying out that Cleopatra had betrayed him to the enemies he had made for her sake. She [Cleopatra] being afraid lest in his fury and despair he might do her a mischief, fled to her monument, and letting down the falling doors, which were strong with bars and bolts, she sent messengers who should tell Antony she was dead. He, believing it, cried out, "Now, Antony, why delay longer? Fate has snatched away the only pretext for which you could say you desired yet to live." ... and so he ran himself into the belly, and laid himself upon the couch. The wound, however, was not immediately mortal. ... When he understood she was alive, he eagerly gave order to the servants to take him up ... Those that were present say that nothing was ever more sad than this spectacle, to see Antony, covered all over with blood and just expiring, thus drawn up, still holding up his hands to her, and lifting up his body with the little force he had left. As, indeed, it was no easy task for the women; and Cleopatra, with all her force, clinging to the rope, and straining with her head to the ground, with difficulty pulled him up, while those below encouraged her with their cries, and joined in all her efforts and anxiety. When she had got him up, she laid him on the bed, tearing all her clothes, which she spread upon him; and, beating her breast with her hands, lacerating herself, and disfiguring her own face with the blood from his wounds, she called him her lord, her husband, her emperor, and seemed to have pretty nearly forgotten all her own evils, she was so intent upon his misfortunes."

"And in the end, like another Paris [and Helen] he [Antony] left the battle to fly to her arms; or rather, to say the truth, Paris fled when he was already beaten; Antony fled first, and, following Cleopatra, abandoned his victory."

"There was no law to prevent Demetrius from marrying several wives; from the time of Philip and Alexander it had become usual with Macedonian kings, and he did no more than was done by Lysimachus and Ptolemy. And those he married he treated honourably. But Antony, first of all, in marrying two wives at once, did a thing which no Roman had ever allowed himself; and then he drove away his lawful Roman wife to please the foreign and unlawful woman. And so Demetrius incurred no harm at all; Antony procured his ruin by his marriage."

XI. CONCLUSIONS

By repetition we see Muhammad was an archangel not a prophet, yet he brought many people closer to the LORD. Thus the Bible is a better reference than the Quran. By the names of sources Q, L, and M, we conclude much of the New Testament is derived from the Old. For example, the Parable of Jesus and the Devil is really God and the Devil, similar to the book of Job. By etymologies we see Jesus was the Son of God not the Messiah, yet He brought many people closer to the LORD. The validity of reincarnation and its pattern implies Jesus was somewhat less than the paragon of virtue. Examining the word "chime" proves the Eucharist a valid sacrament. The Old Testament implies a divine right to Israel for righteous people of Hebrew descent.

We extrapolate by coincidence. The onset of World War I, the assassination of Archduke Franz Ferdinand, being in the pathway of a 19 year old twice, is an act of the LORD. World War II and the Holocaust are linked to the atrocities committed by Khazarian Jews in Eastern Europe prior, namely ethnic genocide in Russia and mass starvation in Ukraine. Historical editing is a common tactic. Atlantis did exist, it was called Aztlán, the homeland of the Aztecs. Extraordinary omens have meaning, Coronavirus among them.

A clearly benevolent Creator implies an explorable universe, not perpetual tantalizing, so we conjecture the unification of physics will lead to the exploration of space. For an elegant ontological proof of the LORD, see St. Anselm.
